weeks' season with the Price-Arlington Company and opened two days later with the Ewing-Taylor Dramatic Company, to do their specialties and play parts.

The Winchesters, Edwin and Jennie, are in their tenth week with the Klark-Scoville Company, playing parts and introducing their musical act. Mrs.
Winchester's trick drumming is proving a strong feature.

Emma Lawrence, lady bag puncher, has just closed fourteen weeks at the Pan-American, Buffalo, with the Southern circuit to follow. She opens Dec. 1 as the leading attraction at the Exposition, Charleston, S. C.

Lady buck dancers will all have a chance to win the "Police Gazette" championship medal at Tammany Hall on the evening of Jan. 30. Those who are summer season at the Opera House Garden, Belleville, Ill., as proprietors and managers, and joined the De Kreko Brothers Carnival Company for eight weeks.

Mr. Howard has charge of the German village.

The success of H. Tillmann Herrmann in his monologue has secured him a series of return dates.
The audiences like his comedy song hits, and four and five encores are always in order. He is filling club and society dates in and about Columbus, Dayton and Cincinnati.

Prof. Helms' Carnival of Wonders engages the following people: Harry Pollworth, manager; The Great Helms, magician, assisted by Mlle. La Belle;
Little Allright, Prince Ko Ko, Lorena, the juggler; Florine, skirt dancer. Prof. Helms introduces several new illusions, including his masterpiece, the electrocution of Czolgosz. The company is booked solid through Illinois, Iowa, Wisconsin and Michigan.

Mr. Elmer E. Knowles, the distinguished hypnotist, while making his daring blind-fold drive on the streets of Kaufman, Tex., was thrown from the hack while driving (blind-folded) four horses at a high rate of speed and narrowly escaped serious injury. He is suffering from a few broken ribs, but the hypnotic performances still continue to amuse their audiences under the capable management of A. Beatrice Knowles.

NINI DIVA AND HER DANCERS.

Nini Diva, who is as handsome off the stage as she is on, has a new sketch entitled "The Fencing Musketeers," which is one of the vaudeville novelties of the season. Her chorus is one of the best drilled in the business, and the costumes of Miss Diva are not to be compared with any others on the stage-to-day. The act, which is staged with regal magnificence, is booked for a run in Paris.

BURLESQUERS WORE BLOOMERS.

The audience at a certain theatre in Atlanta, Ga., felt that they were badly cheated at a recent performance when the ladies of the show, instead of appearing in silken tights, as usual, made their entrance clad in baggy knickerbockers, which effectually concealed the curves of which they are the proud possessors.

The manager explained later that a couple of thieves had "lifted" the best part of the wardrobe, and he had to raid a local clothing store for trousers.

C. DURWARD SERVISS.

C. Durward Serviss, who is possessed of all the talent that a theatrical manager should have, has been a decided success at his chosen profession. With a main office at 47 West Twenty-eighth street, New York, he is manager of Serviss and Baevier's English Stars, Serviss and Baevier's Comedy Entertainers, Serviss and Baevier's Roaring Farce Comedy, "The Poor Mr. Rich," Serviss and Fleming's Minstrels, Serviss and Baevier's Lady Band and Orchestra, and Serviss and Fleming's Fireworks.

NOBLE AND KRENEK.

George Noble and John F. Krennek were bunkies in the Philippines when they were serving under Uncle Sam. The former halls from San Francisco, and the latter's home is in Chicago. Noble was the best boxer at his weight in the regiment and he put many a good man out during his term of enlistment. The photograph was taken in Santa Maria, Province of Bulacan, P. I., January 10, 1901.

STURDY BALL TOSSERS.

The Everett Baseball Team, of Everett, Wash., holds the Northwest amateur record for the season of 1901 by twenty-seven straight victories. The able captain is Walter Thornton who several years ago was one of the crack pitchers with the Chicago club. His hand has not lost his cunning and he can still put them over the plate as good as of old.

J. E. JOHNSTON.

J. E. Johnston is the owner of the Mammoth, Pa., Barber Shop. The establishment is a fine one and is fitted with all modern improvements. He had his photograph taken with his charming little daughter, Garnet Fern.

MARTELLA AND LANCASTER.

Al Martella and Lill Lancaster are clever comedy acrobats who were last season with Harry Morris' Twentieth Century Maids. They have been doing very well this year with Palm's Company.

THE COAST KID.

Ben Benson, who calls himself the Coast Kid, claims to be the youngest all-around tramp in the country. At the age of sixteen years he beat his way to San Francisco and back. Since then he has travelled 15,000 miles.

A FORTY-SEVEN-POUNDER.

S. Miller, of DeKalb, Ill., sent the photograph of his forty-seven-pound fighting champion, whose photograph appears in this issue.

SNAKE CHARMER

TOOK HER PET

REPTILES TO BED

Her Husband Objected and Was Bitten.

ACTRESS HAD NERVE.

Sent a Load of Bird Shot in Her Insulter's Anatomy.

A well-known snake charmer of Paterson, N. J., who says he likes snakes only as a business proposition, has brought a suit for divorce against his wife, who is also a snake charmer, because she insists on taking the reptiles to bed with her.

Before he married her his wife was a snake charmer with the Barnum & Bailey show, and since their marriage he claims his wife "has continuously kept and maintained an assortment of venomous snakes and reptiles in their home" without his consent or permission. He was not afraid of the snakes, and argued only mildly against their presence until "one evening about 11 P. M. the said woman did retire for the night with your petitioner, and after having so retired the said woman did arise, and, going to the receptacle in which were housed the venomous snakes and reptiles, did take therefrom three snakes and came with them into the couch of your petitioner."

He concludes his petition by saying that after "said woman had toyed with the venomous snakes for some time one of them bit him in the left thigh, and he has since been under the care of a physician."

Wouldn't Take a Dare.

A well-known and charming actress of Hamilton, Ont., who is at present visiting at Windsor, was on a hunting trip with some friends the other day. She became separated from her fellow hunters in the woods, and just after she had fired a shot at a bevy of quail three local hunters revealed themselves from behind a thicket. She says that they became impatient and she ordered them to leave her presence. Two of them obeyed, but a Glenagarry avenue railroad man was slow. While he was astride a fence he said:

"Old girl, you wouldn't shoot me, would you?"

The name "old girl" nettled her, and taking aim she fired a charge of bird shot into him. He disappeared, yelling that he was killed. He tells the story that his gun was accidentally discharged.

GRIFFO USED HIS ELBOWS.

Ole Oleson was declared the loser in his fight with Young Griffio in Chicago the other night before the Twenty-second Ward Athletic Club, but only because he was handicapped by the persistent fouling tactics which the Australian indulged in. In every clinch Griffio heeled and used his elbow, thus weakening his opponent considerably. Oleson found fault with the proceedings and claimed foul on different occasions, but Referee Bardell only cautioned the Australian and allowed hostilities to proceed.

From a fighting standpoint Griffio proved to be far from a dead one. His dashing left, delivered with wonderful accuracy, met Oleson's countenance repeatedly. Oleson showed well in mixing with his clever opponent, and in the fourth round inflicted a cut over Griffio's left eye, the result of a right swing.

Griffio fought on the aggressive most of the time and kept his foe busy displaying his blocking powers, which many times failed to avert the Australian's puzzling left hand.

In the semi-windup Jack O'Grady secured the decision over "Kid" Fink, the latter's seconds throwing up the sponge in the fifth round to prevent further punishment. Johnny Ruse made a pretty showing against Young Munger and easily earned the decision at the end of the sixth round.

Jack Kelly and Jack Carmer went four interesting rounds in a preliminary.

FAMOUS TOMBS PRISON

—WHICH WAS SIXTY YEARS A JAIL—

NOW BEING TORN DOWN

It Was One of the Most Familiar Landmarks of New York City and Held Many Noted Criminals.

MANY MURDERERS HANGED IN COURTYARD.

A Brief History of Some of the Better Known Criminals Who Were Confined Within the Gloomy Walls of the Ancient Prison.

The old Tombs prison and court, one of the historic landmarks of New York, is slowly being demolished, and it will not be long before it is a memory of the past. It has ranked as one of the most famous prisons of the past and its history is a history of crime for the past sixty years. Within its walls have been confined all the most famous offenders against the law, and in the little courtyard in the heart of the building scores of murderers have expiated their crimes on the gallows. As a landmark of old New York it stands unique. Its name has been at once a terror and a household word. The Tombs, or the City Prison, as its official title is, is the successor of the Bridewell, built in 1734 and used until 1775, when a new Bridewell was built on a site between that occupied by the present City Hall and Broadway. Singularly enough, the funds for the erection of this building were raised by a popular lottery. It was finished just at the opening of the revolutionary struggle, and the first use to which it was put was as a place of imprisonment for the patriots and the captured soldiers of the Revolutionary army. At one time no less than 816 prisoners were huddled together within its walls, where they died by scores of cold, hunger and disease. At the close of the war the Bridewell was again used as a criminal prison and continued so until 1833, when the need of a larger prison began to be strongly felt and the construction of the present Tombs, originally known as the Halls of Justice, was begun.

About this time John L. Stevens of Hoboken, publisher, on his return from an extensive tour in the East, a book under the title of "Stevens' Travels," which attracted much attention. Among the many illustrations in the book was one of an Egyptian tomb near Thebes. This picture seems to have struck the committee of the common council charged with the duty of selecting a plan for the new prison as an admirable design for the purpose, and they made a report to that effect, with the recommendation, so it is said, that the building should be known as the Tombs. It is more probable, however, that this title was subsequently conferred on the building by some wag with an uncomfortable grimace of humor. However that may be, the name stuck, and it is probable enough that the skyscraper structure now being erected will continue to bear it. The Tombs was completed in 1838, the only addition since that time being the portion of the prison devoted to the detention of women, which was erected about thirteen years ago.

Among the earliest and most famous crimes with which the Tombs is associated was that of John C. Colt, who was hanged for the murder of Samuel Adams, whom he killed in his office in the granite building that stood at the northwest corner of Broadway and Chambers street. Colt, who was an expert accountant and teacher of ornamental penmanship, was sitting in his office on an upper floor on the afternoon of Sept. 17, 1841, when Adams called to collect an account which was overdue. According to Colt's confession, made previous to his conviction, Adams sat on a table and a heated argument took place as to the amount of money which was due. At last Adams dealt Colt a blow, and seizing him by the throat hurled him against the wall. A hammer lay on the table near by and Colt seized it, and in a frenzy rained blow after blow on his assailant's head. Adams fell to the floor and died almost immediately.

Colt appears to have made no attempt to escape, and was quickly traced and arrested. During his trial, which lasted ten days and was the sensation of the time, the prisoner appeared in court fashionably dressed, and apparently unconcerned as to the result. The jury, after prolonged deliberation, found a verdict of murder in the first degree. The case was then carried from court to court, and ultimately Colt was sentenced to be hanged on Nov. 18, 1842, a little more than a year after the commission of the crime.

The killing of Bill Poole in 1855 was the means of creating a greater sensation in the city than that which attended the Colt tragedy. The Know Nothing movement was then at its height, and mob violence and rowdism were rampant in New York. Poole and Tom Hyer, both renowned fighters, were leaders of the "American" faction, John Morrissey and Lew Baker being the acknowledged champions of the opposition. Poole, who claimed to be without a peer in the art of rough and tumble fighting, challenged Morrissey to meet him at the pier at the foot of Amos street and determine which was the better man. Morrissey kept the appointment, but on reaching the battleground was set upon by Poole's friends and mercilessly beaten. It was this that led to the murder of Poole, although it was proved that Morrissey himself had no part in the tragedy.

All those implicated in the murder either gave themselves up or were arrested that night, with the exception of Baker, who made his escape to Jersey City, where he lay concealed until March 10, when he took passage on the brig Isabella Jewitt, bound for the Canary Isles. Several days elapsed before his flight was discovered, and as soon as his destination was known officers were sent in pursuit in the fast yacht Grapeshot, which reached the port of Tenerife two hours ahead of the Jewitt. On her arrival Baker was arrested and brought back to New York, where he and his friends were placed in the Tombs and indicted for the murder of Poole. Baker alone was placed on trial, but after proceedings lasting for fifteen days the jury was unable to agree.

One of the most famous prisoners of the Tombs was Mrs. Emma Augusta Cunningham, who was tried for the murder of Dr. Burdell and acquitted after a most sensational trial. The mystery of how the doctor came by his death has never been solved. The doctor was a well-to-do dentist, and owned the house at 31 Bond street, in which his body, pierced with no less than fifteen stab wounds, was found on the morning of the last day in January, 1857. Burdell was an eccentric man, intensely avaricious, and by no means of irreproachable morals. He only occupied a small portion of the house, in which he lived and conducted his practice and rented the remainder to Mrs. Cunningham, a middle aged widow, who kept boarders. Among these was John J. Eckels, who seems to have been a rival of the dentist in the affections of the widow.

Burdell was last seen alive at 5 o'clock in the afternoon of January 30, when he left his house and started in the direction of the Metropolitan Hotel to get his dinner. At half past 10 o'clock that night a neighbor was aroused by a shriek of "Murder!" and ran to his window, but as the cry was not repeated he went to bed. On the following morning a boy who had charge of the dentist's rooms opened the door of his sleeping apartment, as he was accustomed to do, for the purpose of making the fire. On entering he stumbled over the head of a man who lay on the floor in a pool of blood. At first no suspicion attached to Mrs. Cunningham, but at the inquest it was developed that on the evening before the murder she had told the constable Hannah Conlan, that she had heard that Dr. Burdell was about to rent the house to some other woman, and added in a rage that he had better be careful, as he might never live to sign the lease. Mrs. Cunningham was placed on trial on May 6, 1857.

Among the distinguished inmates of the Tombs who suffered the extreme penalty of the law within its walls was Capt. Nathaniel Gordon, the slave trader. Gordon sailed from Havana in the summer of 1860 in the ship Erie, bound for the west coast of Africa, and was captured on his return voyage with nearly 900 negroes packed in the hold by the United States cruiser Monongahela, in which he and his mates were brought prisoners to New York, and after a short detention in the Eldridge street jail were transferred for safe keeping until trial to the Tombs. After two trials he was convicted and sentenced to be hanged in the courtyard of the prison on Feb. 21, 1862. On the day before the execution he attempted suicide by poison, but was resuscitated. At the last moment he broke down utterly, and

It was only by the administration of stimulants that he was enabled to walk supported to the scaffold where he was hanged, surrounded by a strong guard of United States marines.

Among the most famous prisoners of the Tombs of a later period were Foster, the "car hook murderer," "Frenchy," the Arabian outcast, who was convicted of the murder of "Old Shakespeare" and escaped with imprisonment for life; Chastine Cox, the negro murderer of Mrs. Hull; Carlyle Harris, who suffered death in the electric chair for the murder of his young and beautiful wife, Helen Potts, and Dr. Buchanan, another wife murderer, who paid the same penalty.

In all about three score persons have suffered death on the gallows in the Tombs courtyard. Among the more famous executions were those of Jack Reynolds, the murderer of William Townsend; John Real, who shot Policeman Smedick in 1860; John Thomas and Michael Nixon. On Dec. 17, 1875, the negroes, Ellis, Weston and Thompson, were hanged together. On Aug. 24, 1889, four woman murderers, Patrick Packenham, James Nolan, Fernando Carroll and John Lewis, were simultaneously executed on two scaffolds. In the early days there was no regular hangman, the office being not unusually filled by the sheriff in person. One of the earliest regular hangmen was George Simpson, who was succeeded by his assistant, George W. Isaacs. To him belongs the honor of abolishing the old style of drop gallows with a trap, such as is at present used in England, and substituted in its stead the gallows with a counter weight, by which the condemned is jerked into the air and his neck swiftly broken by the shock. This gallows became known as the "New York pattern," and is in general use throughout the country today. It was perfected by Isaac's successor, Joseph P. Atkinson, who tested its efficiency on many occasions, and who was the last man to hold the dread office of executioner.

SCORNFUL SUITOR

AFTER FIVE YEARS

MURDERS TWO

During Prison Term He Plotted to Have Revenge.

HE DIED A SUICIDE.

Killed the Woman Who Had Rejected
Him and Her Husband.

The man who figures in this story nursed his revenge because of unrequited love during his five years' imprisonment, and then, when he was released, went to Amsterdam, N. Y., shot the woman who rejected him, and her husband, and then killed himself.

His name was Fred Bankert, and his victims were W. H. Green and Mrs. Green, who was formerly a Miss Harrison.

It was in 1895 that he called at the girl's house. She received him in the parlor. He immediately drew forth a pistol and shot her three times. Bankert cut his own throat with a knife and then proceeded to his home. Miss Harrison recovered, though severely wounded. Bankert also recovered, and in February, 1896, pleaded guilty to assault in the first degree and was sentenced to eight years in Clinton prison, at Dannemora. He was released in June last with the usual commutation for good behavior and returned to Amsterdam.

Upon his return his former victim, who in January, 1899, had married William H. Green, asked Chief of Police Bartlett for permission to carry a revolver, announcing that she was still fearful that Bankert had designs upon her life.

Bankert protested that he had no intention of further harming the woman.

Bankert went to the home of the Greens, on Elizabeth street, about half-past one o'clock in the morning, and with a rope ladder climbed to the veranda roof, after removing his shoes, which were found beside the porch. He crossed the roof, leaving his tracks in the heavy frost and opened a window.

He had with him a hatchet and a revolver, and went to the room where Green and his wife were sleeping, instantly killing Green, inflicting such wounds upon Mrs. Green that she died later, and then committed suicide.

James Whitney's family, with whom the Greens had visited until ten o'clock that night, occupy the lower floor of the house.

At five minutes to two o'clock Whitney heard the shots overhead, but waited until his daughter came home, half an hour later, and then, with her companion, Philip Cady, started up stairs.

Upon the bed lay Mr. and Mrs. Green, while across them was the body of Bankert. Mrs. Green was unconscious. Green was dead, as was Bankert. Clutched in Bankert's hand was a revolver, and on the floor lay a hatchet.

Mr. Whitney sent to Police Headquarters, and policemen and physicians immediately responded. They found that Green had been shot in the neck and his skull crushed with the hatchet. Bankert had shot himself directly over the heart. Mrs. Green had been shot between the left arm and shoulder. Her head had likewise been crushed with the hatchet. She died a few hours later.

When Bankert gained the interior of the Green home he went to the bedroom and evidently found both Mr. and Mrs. Green sleeping. Whether he used the hatchet or the revolver first will never be known, but it is supposed that he struck each of his victims with the hatchet.

Every indication showed that Mr. Green had made a desperate fight against awful odds. It is probable he was struck two or three times with the hatchet, for his head was crushed and the wounds were all deep. The shot in the neck was probably fired after the struggle.

Only one shot was fired at Mrs. Green, but the hatchet had inflicted frightful wounds about the head. After killing his victims, Bankert, placing the muzzle of the revolver close against his heart, fired one bullet, which killed him instantly.

RUHLIN NOT IN JEFFRIES' CLASS

- CRITICIZED FOR NOT MAKING A GAMER SHOWING-

WHEN HE FOUGHT FOR THE TITLE

Californians Claim He Quit Before He Was Half Whipped and Should Have Taken a Knockout.

JEFFRIES COMPARED WITH OTHER CHAMPIONS.

He Developed Unquestionable Skill--Sharkey Expects to Beat Him, but Fitz Declares He is a Real Fighter.

Gus Ruhlin has come in for some pretty harsh criticism for his manager's action in throwing up the sponge instead of taking the final quieting punch and going out in the manner which the traditional doings in the ring indicate to be the proper way of meeting defeat. The consensus of opinion is that the booming which the Akron Giant received was unwarranted, and people who put up their good money at the box office to witness a fight believe they were humbugged. To them it looks as if clever managers had arranged a little easy money for Jeffries in putting him against a man who could not beat him with the aid of one of the Oregon's thirteen-inch guns. Ruhlin was pitifully outclassed and the wonder is that he was ever induced to enter the ring with Jeffries.

The contest did not demonstrate much except that Ruhlin is not a high-class man. Jeffries had hardly any opportunity to show what he could do if pushed. He appeared in excellent condition, was quick on his feet and never lost his head. He apparently made no effort to avoid Ruhlin's gentle taps, but went steadily after him. Apparently he could have ended the fight in the first round had he been so inclined.

The sports who saw Ruhlin's pitiful exhibition are asking what has become of his "bulldog courage," his "greatly improved form," his "secret training process" and all the other aids to championship that his manager so freely cackled about.

Jeffries knocked the condition, the wind, the secret training process, championship aspirations and everything else out of Ruhlin with his fearful body blows, says Bill Naughton. Ruhlin was cowed and palpably distressed. He did not fight back. It is any odds you mention that he couldn't. It was his lack of retaliation in the last three rounds that is making people murmur.

One of the worst things about this affair is that Jeffries receives very little credit. He has many attributes, no doubt, for which no credit is due him. Nature has performed wonders for the big champion.

Some people say that he does not compare favorably with past and gone champions. Discussions of this kind are futile. There is no means of arriving at an intelligent conclusion. You can say that a latter day race horse is not as good as Salvador, and you can produce Salvador's mile record to back your argument.

You can't do anything like that in the case of champions of the ring. Records or marks by which old heroes and the present kingpins may be compared--there are none. As the world is improving in everything else, however, it is reasonable to suppose that our modern gladiators are superior to the old timers.

It has been said that Corbett or Jackson would have stopped Jeffries' gallop had he been of their day. Possibly. Jeffries has not the mechanical genius as a ringster that either of these men had. At the same time he has many things that they had not. Neither of the men was as strong as Jeffries, nor had the powers of assimilation, nor the grizzly-like paws that he possesses. Neither of them could have cracked Sharkey's ribs as he did. When a fellow has these qualifications and can box some besides he is a bad man to be left alone with in a ring.

Had Jeffries tried to make his way toward the championship goal when Corbett, Jackson and other fighting strikers were in their prime they might, while he was yet a cub, have stopped his gallop, discouraged him, and made him turn his attention to something apart from pugilism.

May be he was lucky to blossom out when these great ringsters were out of the running. But seeing that he has experienced no setbacks and has developed into the strong, confident and heavy-fisted brute he is, I think he is more of an all-around fighting machine than ever Jackson, Corbett or any one else knew how to be.

Jeffries although he won didn't think the fight amounted to much, for he prepared himself for a more interesting struggle and expected to "go" a longer route. Speaking about the battle afterwards he said:

"It was a little easy money for me. He did not hit hard enough to hurt me. Ruhlin did not put up as good a fight as I expected he would. I expected to win and was not surprised at the result. I took my time in beating him. I had not started to fight when his manager threw up the sponge. Had I gone at him I am sure he would not have lasted two rounds. The blows I gave him in the stomach did the work."

"Gus tried a new punch on me. It was a heavy right cross after a clinch, and when I saw it coming I simply laid my head on his breast and laughed at him. This disheartened him. Ruhlin was scared from the first round. I knew it, and did not fear him. His punches never bothered me. He landed on my sore lip and made it bleed. He had no chance, and I do not blame him for refusing to go on. I don't think he quit. I hit him two or three awful punches in the body."

"Some people said I could not stand a blow in the solar plexus. I think I proved that I could, because I let him land heavily on my body and never felt the blow."

The prospects are that Jeffries will be left in undisturbed possession of his championship title for some time to come. Sharkey, with a display of bravado hardly justified by circumstances, claims to want to fight him and in this connection his opinion of the recent fight ought to prove interesting.

"Well, it is all over, and Jeffries is still the champion," he said. "There was never a doubt in my mind as to who was the better man, and the result was just as I predicted. Ruhlin was never in Jeffries' class, and it appears to me that he made a very weak effort in his go with the champion. Jeffries was all over him from the start, and after the first round Ruhlin never had a chance."

"It was simply a case of how much punishment he could stand before going out, and his second's action in there could be only one result--Jeff would win in a walk."

"Well, didn't he?"

"Ruhlin was simply hammered and pummeled so that he hadn't a living show to win. He was a loser the minute Jeff got in his first solid wallop in the second round. That first blood business didn't count a tuppence. It used to go in the old London prize ring fights, when the sports bet on the first flow of the ruby, but with the mits even a slight tap on the lips will draw blood."

"The way it looks to me, that little tap which caused the fluid to show on Jeff's lips aroused the 'boller-maker' to a realization of the situation. It woke him up--took away the nervousness, the stage fright he was evidently laboring under, and brought out the fighting instinct in him."

"In my opinion 'it was the blow that killed father,' it was Ruhlin's undoing for sure, for Jeff, after he got that tap, went at his man like a real fighter and whipped him quickly."

Being convinced that Jeffries "has the wallop" and is a "real fighter," it will be interesting to observe how near Fitzsimmons will get to meeting him in the ring again--without doing so.

throwing up the sponge to save him from further punishment was an act of charity. Altogether it was a poor championship battle, and Ruhlin's showing must have been a great disappointment to those who backed him because he seemed better than a 4 to 10 shot."

It is difficult to reconcile Sharkey's opinion of Ruhlin and his own expectation of defeating Jeffries. It was after the sailor and the boller-maker had their memorable twenty-five-round struggle at Coney Island that Sharkey tackled Ruhlin the second time and was beaten all the way and finally dropped in the fifteenth round. He did not fight as well as Ruhlin at any stage and yet he says that in his opinion the latter had no chance with Jeffries, but he himself expects to beat the latter when they meet again.

There is a flaw in the "dope" somewhere. Another opinion which will interest the POLICE GAZETTE readers in view of a greater likelihood of a battle is that of Bob Fitzsimmons. He is more logical in his reasoning than the sailor. He is a great believer in the theory that the hard puncher is the man to "string your checks" with.

"It is always the man behind the wallop who carries off the money and all that goes with the winner," said Fitzsimmons in speaking of the fight.

"The man in front of the punch gets all that's coming to him, too, and that is usually the short end of the purse and a grand display of falling leonards."

"Jeffries can hit like an army mule working over time, while Ruhlin's blows are merely love taps."

"I have said time and again that if Jeff mixed it up

Read the following, by William Cole, M. D., Washington, D. C., published in the United Investigating Reports regarding the prescription from which this remedy for curing Lost Manhood is prepared:

Some fifteen years ago the writer gave attention to the cure of nervous disorders, and found that the late Dr. Wilson, Professor of Chemistry and Practitioner of Medicine in Bellevue Medical College of New York, had a formula of wonderful power to restore to men the fullness of their physical and mental strength. In the year 1883 the celebrated Dr. Wilson died, and his formula has been obtained by L. F. Page, of 301 State street, Marshall, Michigan, who prepares it according to the original prescription, and from our analysis of the same, by our Board of Investigation, we find it composed of pure and fresh drugs, and that it is sold under the name of "Dr. Wilson's Restorative Remedies." Our investigation was extended into a great number of similar preparations, none of which were found equal to the above, while many were prepared by those who knew little or nothing about therapeutics or materia medica. We hereby caution the public against the use of all uncertain remedies, and all who need nerve-life bringing medicine we recommend them to take Dr. Wilson's Restorative Remedies, prepared and sold by L. F. Page, 301 State street, Marshall, Michigan, and unto the aforesaid Dr. Wilson's Restorative Remedies we extend the official endorsement of the United States Investigating Reports.

I want every weak, disappointed and debilitated man to write to me for a free sample package of this remedy. Cast aside your modesty. This matter is too important. Act at once with manly decision.

You are older now and can look back and see the mistakes you have made, but you cannot recall the vigor and fire of the springtime of robust manhood. Your transgressions have left their mark upon you. Your errors and excesses have ravaged your system and undermined your nerve force. Quickness, backache, nervousness and debilitating drains and worn-out shrunken and lifeless organs are making your life a miserable existence devoid of pleasure. You hesitate and falter; you are not the man you once were, and you know it.

Do not delay, for the longer you let your trouble run, the harder it will be to cure. Write to-day for a free sample package of this wonderful medicine. One dose will convince you of its marvelous powers. I want to help every suffering man in America to regain his health and strength and the ability to enjoy the pleasures of life. Address, L. F. # POLICE GAZETTE SAID JEFFRIES

—RESULT PROVED THE ACCURACY OF ITS ANALYSIS—

WOULD WIN IN FIVE ROUNDS

Los Angeles Boilermaker will Probably be Left in Undisputed Possession of His Title for Some Time.

McGOVERN AND YOUNG CORBETT ARE READY.

Denver Lad Confident of Winning, and Says He will at least Take a Licking. Has Terry Neglected His Training?—Philadelphia as a Sporting Centre.

Jim Jeffries' victory over Gus Ruhlin did not surprise me any. In analyzing the conditions of the match two weeks prior to the fight I said in this column:

"The consensus of opinion among those who have a knowledge of the merits of the men is that Jeffries will win in from thirteen to seventeen rounds. I believe, too, that the Los Angeles man will win, but I believe the end will be reached inside of five rounds."

It is all right to call a winner, but when one is able to predict exactly where the fight will end, something else besides guesswork must be considered and we find it in the analysis of what the men have done in the ring on previous occasions. In summing up the respective merits of the two men I said

"Ruhlin is handicapped with a nervous disposition. He lacks the temperament to anticipate the outcome of a fight in a philosophical way. The few days immediately preceding a battle finds him struggling with doubts and fears about the probable outcome, and the consequence is that when the crucial moment arrives he is in a condition of nervous excitement, which precludes all possibility of his doing himself justice until two or three rounds have been fought, when confidence in himself returns and he is able to display his real ability."

"In all his fights that I have witnessed he invariably impressed me with the idea that he is afraid of the man in front of him. He begins by feeling and feeling—not in an intelligent way which suggests a desire to analyze his opponent's weak points, but more as if he feared to get into the game. Every movement of his rival is met with an effort to sidestep the culminating impact, and his nervous eagerness to avoid blows is easily manifest."

Ruhlin lost to Joe Kennedy, the 'Frisco fighter, in twenty rounds, and form players, who recall how easily the latter was whipped by Maher at the Broadway Athletic Club, and only a few weeks ago by Jeffries, find him a medium for the argument that Ruhlin has no chance whatever to win from Jeffries, considering the marvellous improvement which the latter has shown."

"Everybody who saw Sharkey's last fight with Ruhlin will recall how desperately the sailor tried for the first five or six rounds to 'nail' Ruhlin before he got his 'ring legs.' But in doing so he weakened himself and finally became too tired to keep his hands up. A light punch on the jaw was enough to send Sharkey to the carpet. Fitzsimmons, who is a student and knows well the points, weak and strong, of every man he goes against, was on to Ruhlin's curves, and when they fought never gave him a chance to acquire confidence in himself, but kept after him from the time they started until he had him out in the sixth round."

"Jeffries has been put wise to Ruhlin's methods, and from an inside source I learn that he intends to force the pace at the beginning and does not expect the fight to last over three rounds—while not such a clever boxer as the Akronite, he can hit harder and is game enough to go in and take a chance."

"Much depends upon Harry Corbett's interpretation of the Marquis of Queensberry rules. If they are strictly observed and hitting with one hand free is permitted, Jeffries has a decided advantage, for he is a better fighter than Ruhlin, and his strength and weight gives him added advantages."

That in part is the argument I used to justify my prediction that Jeffries would win in five rounds, and the details of the fight substantiate the views I expressed prior to the meeting. Ruhlin's nervousness at the outset enabled the Californian to take a lead in the first round and the Akron man was never permitted to do any damaging work. Jeffries realized the weakness of the man in front of him and took advantage of it by forcing matters from the beginning. Ruhlin's nervousness never left him, while on the other hand, Jeffries, calm, cold, calculating and cruel, fought his helpless opponent to a standstill in every round. Why he did not finish the job sooner is something that I have been unable to understand. He had him battered to pieces in the first round and should have finished him in the second. Perhaps a feeling of consideration for the people who paid from $2 to $20 to see a fight prompted him to prolong the agony. At any rate his consideration was not appreciated, for in falling to stand in front of the raking fire of the enemy and go down to a glorious defeat, the Akron man has had to withstand the galling accusation of being a "quitter."

It doesn't look to me as if Jeff's claim to the title will be disputed for some time to come. Sharkey is posing as the one who is next in line for a fight, but the defeat of Ruhlin was an object lesson for the sailor, and despite his utterances to the contrary, he won't be in a hurry to tackle the big boilermaker again. His broken "slats" testify most eloquently to the effectiveness of Jeffries' sledge-hammer blows, and if he can be induced to tackle the job again it will only be because the loser's end of the purse will be sufficiently attractive to take a beating for.

Before the fight Fitz did a little cackling, in a vague sort of a way, intended to impress people with the idea that, although he had retired, he would not be averse to "crossing arms," as old Bill Toovey used to say in the halcyon days of Harry Hill's, with the actor-boilermaker, but it is a noticeable fact that since the fight he has been impressively silent upon the subject and doubtless prefers to drop the matter. A victory for Ruhlin over Jeffries would have been Fitz's salvation.

He would have emerged from the seclusion of his Bensonhurst farm and taken Ruhlin's measure like breaking sticks, but Jeffries' success practically puts him beyond the pale of championship glory and he will never fight again.

There is a dark-skinned individual known as "Denver Ed" Martin, who, strange to say, impresses me with the thought that he will have something to do in championship affairs before long. He has been fighting several years and has acquired considerable proficiency. His experience as Ruhlin's sparring partner and trainer has been of considerable benefit to him, and a year or two will see him branching out in the fighting line. He is young, almost if not quite as clever as Ruhlin, can punch harder, is ambitious and thoroughly game. As I said several weeks ago, of all the men now looming up on the pugilistic horizon not one has better qualifications for usurping the title than he.

Of the white men who are expected to figure in the pugilistic history of the immediate future not one is worth thirty cents. The next champion will be a black man, mark the prediction.

Since writing the above my attention has been called to an effort which is already being made to trot Martin out as a candidate for stellar honors, and, incidentally, the alacrity shown by Jeffries drawing the color line to shut the Denver black man out of the game. When Jeff was asked the other day if he would fight Martin, if he beat Ruhlin, Delaney chimed in by saying, "No, we won't fight a negro for the championship. There never has been a battle for that title in the heavyweight class in this country and Jeffries is not going to open the ball. Suppose he were to fight Martin and be defeated, which does not seem possible. America would have to bow to a negro champion. Oh, but what is the use of talking about it. It will never happen, and you can put that in your hat for reference."

"But," said a listener, "Jeffries fought Armstrong, Peter Jackson, and only recently Hank Griffin."

"They were not championship battles, were they?" retorted Billy.

No, I might say in reply, and the three men referred to were a long way from the championship class and the title was never in danger, but methinks they have heard something in Jeffries' camp about the black man's ability and want none of his game. At the same time I think it would be a trifle foolhardy to send Martin after the eggs just now. He will keep for a year or so and in the meantime will develop.

Hartford, Conn., will on Thanksgiving Day be the scene of the greatest pugilistic contest of the year when Terry McGovern and Young Corbett, of Denver, meet for a twenty-five round turn-up. I may be wrong in my estimate of the Denver lad's chances, but while I am loyal in my admiration of the little Brooklyn whirlwind and believe he will win, he never faced a harder proposition or one fraught with so much danger to his title. He has "class," that indefinable something which makes a stake horse better than a plater, where speed is inborn and good breeding furnishes the material for something of a higher order. We have seen horses of mediocre quality hang up track records which stake animals are unable to approach and yet when the same horses meet in a race class is demonstrated and the speedy record breaking plater is beaten. We know McGovern has class and the only question which confronts us is namely, how much class has Corbett? He has beaten the same men upon whose reputations McGovern ascended to the position of eminence he now occupies, and he possesses the same qualifications which brought McGovern so prominently to the front, whether he will show to any better advantage than the other lads who tried to wrest the title from him; but of one thing I am sure and that is he will fight a hard battle as long as he is in it. As he told me himself the other day "I've come a long way to get something; maybe it will be the title and maybe a licking; but if it's a licking I'll get a good one and take it as long as I can," and that's what his admirers in Denver are banking upon. They know he is thoroughly game, fairly clever, is a puncher and a good ring tactician. Maybe Terry won't let him show his points, but I am inclined to think the battle will go along for quite a spell, as they say, and the longer it goes the better chance the Denverite has of winning out.

George McFadden, Frank Erne and Terry McGovern for 25 cents, or any other three you may select. $1.00 buys thirteen of them.

It occurs to me that Terry has underestimated the ability of the little chap who is going to fight him and has not taken the precaution to get himself into championship form. He has been traveling on the road with a theatrical company until a week ago, training some, of course, but not that solid substantial kind of open air work which is so essential and conducive to health. Corbett, on the other hand, has been working like a demon, evidently determined not to be anything lacking in the matter of condition. If all my expectations are realized it will be the fight of the year.

Where is this fellow Jack O'Brien going to stop? He goes along in a calm, dignified manner, fighting and beating the pugilistic premiers of the old country until his victory over Frank Craig, the "Har-

FITZSIMMONS MAY

---TO FIGHT FOR TITLE---

CHALLENGE JEFF

Has Retired From the Ring but Still Able to Do Battle.

SAYS BIG JIM FLUNKED.

Still Believes He Was "Doped" When Beaten by Jeffries.

The success achieved by Jeffries in defeating Gus Ruhlin for the championship of the world revives the question of who will be his next opponent in a ring battle for the title. It is obvious that he must fight someone before he relinquishes his claim, and as he has successfully demonstrated his superiority over all the men who are logical aspirants for the title, it is evident that his next opponent must come from among those whom he has already vanquished. Tom Sharkey has already issued a challenge, but the question of his sincerity is mooted. He has "gone back," as they say in sporting parlance, and his recent fights have been a succession of disappointments as a means of comparison. The sturdy sailor has never fully recovered from the effects of the beating he received from Jeffries at Coney Island, and the wisdom of avoiding another battle seems to suggest that the ex-man-o'-warman is "four-flushing" a little. Sharkey gave Jeffries a great fight, but it is the opinion of many of the best informed experts that all the fight was knocked out of him on that occasion and that he would be an easy mark for the champion if they ever came together again.

Fitzsimmons has always claimed that he was "dosed" when he fought Jeffries, and believes to this day that he would have defeated the latter but for the treachery of some one of the attendants. He was talking about fights and fighters the other night while the description of the Jeffries-Ruhlin battle, then in progress, was being detailed to him. When the final round came in, he said "That was just the way I beat Ruhlin. He came to me, and I copped him, first in the stomach in the second round and finally on the jaw."

"Those people who say that Ruhlin had me groggy in the first round do not know they are alive. I was never groggy in my life, except, of course, in the mill with Jeffries, and again when Chynowski knocked me down in the Boston Theatre. Ruhlin pounded my head as hard as he could, but he had no effect upon me. I did not feel him at all, but I guess he felt me all right. Jeffries is not what might be called a knockerout. He is too slow and deliberate, too, and at the same time does not care to take too many chances. Does anybody believe I was myself when he put me to sleep? Of course, the dope story has been laughed at, but just the same I did not know what happened after the third round. I must have put up the rankest kind of a fight. But later when I undertook to fight Ruhlin, Sharkey and Jeffries two weeks apart I was as fit as I ever was in my life. That was the time I could have whipped Jeffries as sure as fate, but he flunked. There is no getting around that. He could have won $20,000 from me by staying six rounds, but he crawled."

"Will I fight the winner of the Jeffries-Ruhlin mill? Didn't I retire from the ring sometime ago? Why, of course I did. I retired once before, but the newspapers dragged me out and made me go at it again. Do I look as if I could lick any of those big fellows?" And Fitz inflated his massive chest and doubled up his freckled fists until the muscles in his wrists seemed to be on the point of snapping.

"Fighting is not what it used to be," the Cornishman continued. "The days of big purses and large gate receipts seem to have gone forever, though, perhaps, some day the game may be revived. I believe boxing will receive a boom again. It is a healthy sport, but it has been shamefully abused. New York liked boxing while it was on the level, but as soon as the crooks and fakirs got to work the jig was up."

"Do I keep in condition all the time? Well yes, in a way. I'm not drinking anything and, for that matter, I never drink much. I punch the bag a bit and am fond of outdoor exercises. While I'll admit I'm getting old, I feel that there is all of the strength and skill left with me that made Fitz famous. And do you know that the American people regard me to-day as the real champion? Jeffries may have won the title, but he flunked when I asked him to defend it. He knows that I could have beaten him when I offered to meet him right after doing up Ruhlin and Sharkey. His flunk virtually won back the championship for me."

"Are you sure, Fitz, that you have no desire to fight again?" he was asked.

"I've retired!" laughed the lanky pugilist, as he hurried away, with a crowd of urchins at his heels. Fitzsimmons never looked better. He weighs about 180 pounds, and it would not take much to get him in fighting trim again. It would not be at all surprising if he should challenge the winner of the last heavyweight contest.

JOHN HUGHES WANTS TO WALK.

Old John Hughes, better known as "the Lepper" and the "Police Gazette" champion pedestrian, wants to walk again. He has challenged any two men in the world to meet him in a six-day race for $250 a side. Hughes prefers Hegelman as one of his competitors.

"The Lepper" is in good health and says he can walk and run as well as he ever did. He wants three men in to insure a race, and says his money will show he means business. He would be willing to have the match in Pennsylvania or somewhere in the West where six-day continuous races are lawful.

HANLON WAS EASY FOR GANS.

Jack Hanlon is a Philadelphian who enjoys a questionable reputation as a fighter, but he made the mistake of his life when he tackled Joe Gans at Baltimore on Nov. 15, for in 1 1/2 minutes the clever negro lightweight administered a thirty-third degree knockout. Like many other foolish youths Hanlon rushed Gans and in the second round was dropped with one of Gans' quick left jolts to the jaw and a right to the opposite side. He was out two minutes.

The men were scheduled for twenty rounds, and the house was packed to the doors. The gloves were as big as pillows, but the Quaker was unable to avoid them. He was dropped in the first round, and when Gans picked him up he rushed at him like a bull, only to be sent reeling to the ropes. He was no match for the Baltimorean, who gave an object lesson in how to dispose of a good thing.

PARKER COULDN'T THROW HIM.

Frank Jordan, the Brooklyn strong boy, who is in Baltimore now with Prof. Dan Levey, met Harvey Parker twice, on November 11 and 13, at the Monumental Theatre, where Parker was meeting all comers. Burlington, the Baltimore heavyweight wrestler, was to go on with Parker but did not show up, so Jordan, who was there, said he would go on in Graco-Roman style and Parker took him on. He stayed the limit, fifteen minutes, and got his $25. He made the return match catch-as-catch-can style and won again. Jordan weighs 145 pounds, the same as Parker, and is ready to meet any wrestler his weight.

ONE HONEST MAN

Dear Editor: Please inform your readers that if written to confidentially I will mail in a sealed letter the plan pursued by which I was permanently restored to health and vigor after years of suffering from troubles peculiar to men.

I have no scheme to extort money from any one. I was robbed and swindled by quacks until I nearly lost faith in mankind, but thank heaven, I am now well, vigorous and strong, and anxious to make this certain means of cure known to all.

Having nothing to sell or send C. O. D., I want no money. Address W. J. WALKER, Box 606, Delray, Mich.
